3 they were forced to leave behind. The second is the National Flag of the Lao People’s Democratic 4 Republic (Lao PDR), which consists of red-blue-red stripes with a white circle, and is the official 5 flag of the current government, adopted in 1975, and represents the nation of Laos today; and

9 refugee camps in Thailand across the Mekong River, many of whom then emigrated to the United 10 States during the late 1970s and throughout the 1980s; and

14 moment to reflect on the community’s struggles, and a time to honor its ancestors, and celebrate
