1            WHEREAS, Fred Toyosaburo Korematsu was born on January 30, 1919, in Oakland,

2        California, the son of Japanese immigrant parents, and was raised with a strong sense of civic 3        responsibility and belief in the promise of American democracy; and

4            WHEREAS, Following the United States' entry into World War II, President Franklin
5        Delano Roosevelt issued Executive Order 9066, authorizing the forced removal and detention of 6        people of Japanese descent from their homes, without individualized evidence or due process; and

7            WHEREAS, At the age of twenty-three, Fred Korematsu refused to comply with this 8        order, asserting his constitutional rights as an American citizen, and was arrested and convicted, 9        ultimately challenging the legality of Executive Order 9066 before the United States Supreme 10      Court; and

11           WHEREAS, Although the Supreme Court upheld his conviction in Korematsu v. United 12      States, later judicial and historical findings revealed that the government had suppressed evidence

14      Fred Korematsu's conviction; and

15           WHEREAS, Fred Korematsu devoted his life to public education and advocacy for civil 16      liberties, speaking out against racial discrimination and unjust government action, and was 17      awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 1998; and

18           WHEREAS, The State of Rhode Island was founded on the radical principle that liberty 19      of conscience must be protected, a belief championed by Roger Williams, who stood against

1 orthodoxy and coercion in matters of belief, knowledge, and inquiry, and insisted that freedom 2 requires the courage to dissent from prevailing power; and

3 WHEREAS, Just as Roger Williams defended freedom of conscience and the right to 4 question authority in the pursuit of truth, Fred Korematsu stood for constitutional liberty, due 5 process, and equality under the law at a moment when fear and government power threatened 6 those principles; and

7 WHEREAS, Rhode Island's enduring motto, "Hope," reflects a commitment to learning 8 from history, protecting individual rights, and remaining vigilant in defense of civil liberties, 9 especially during times of crisis; and

10 WHEREAS, Designating Fred Korematsu Day of Civil Liberties and the Constitution 11 provides an opportunity for civic education, reflection, and renewed dedication to the 12 constitutional values that sustain a free and democratic society; and

13 WHEREAS, On January 30, 2026, a public educational program will be held in 14 observance of Fred Korematsu Day of Civil Liberties and the Constitution, hosted by Roger
